Dear Guy:

These are the pictures I promised you. Spain is a beautiful country in which to hunt. Unfortunately, we had very wet weather. It rained every day and it was cold and windy but quite invigorating. The rains did wash out some of the mountain roads. I was scheduled to go after the ibex but couldn't get up into the mountains due to the weather conditions. That, and the chamois are on my list for next year's hunt in Spain.

Alphonso Fabres' (he is not in the pictures) is a fantastic guide. He is in his mid 40's but has been hunting all his life and has over 2,000 mounted trophies from all over the world. He has all types of different hunts ranging from trophy animals such as this to a combination of pheasant and partridge hunting, bullfighting and trophy hunting which can all be done in a week's time. After relinquishing the presidency, you may want to get in touch with Alphonso for some superb hunting and good times.

We will be measuring the 20 point red stag deer on its return to the U.S. We are in hopes of a world record classification.

Hope all is well.

My best,

Charles H. Bechert II, M.D.

P.S. The fallow deer is unique to Spain. It is a smaller deer than the red stag and an exciting one to catch. We had a very unique experience in the night hunt chasing the mouflon sheep. This occurred at 1 o'clock in the morning on a rainy and windy night shooting from the jeep, bounding off of rocks and trees. What a chase! I think Spain by the way, is the only country that allows night hunting.
